Market commentary

In July, one of the main sources of volatility across global markets was the increasingly active intervention of the U.S. administration in financial markets. Verbal interventions around a potential deal with Iran kept oil prices in check despite a tight physical market. Toward the end of the month, a similar approach was applied in FX markets through a coordinated U.S.-Japan intervention in the yen. Washington is likely seeking to smooth market moves in order to keep long-term yields within a comfortable range. Such measures can temporarily influence prices and sentiment, but they do not eliminate the underlying imbalances to which markets ultimately return.

In July, the fund manager maintained a long position in oil and remained short U.S. Treasuries. Restrictions in the Strait of Hormuz continued to reduce oil supply, inventories declined, and positioning remained extremely bearish. Higher oil prices continued to exert inflationary pressure on the long end of the curve, while Kevin Warsh's decision to refrain from providing forward guidance on future Fed policy increased the uncertainty premium in U.S. Treasuries. The fund's long U.S. dollar position was supported by interest-rate differentials and the dollar's safe-haven status, while a stronger currency also helps contain goods inflation, which is particularly important for the current administration ahead of the November elections.

High interest rates remain one of the main sources of pressure on risk assets, so we maintained short positions in the Nasdaq and metals, while also holding a long position in the VIX volatility index. Our cautious stance on risk assets was balanced by a long position in China, supported by government policy and technological advances in AI and semiconductors.

Toward the end of the month, volatility across the fund's positions, particularly the U.S. dollar position, increased following the coordinated U.S.-Japan intervention in the yen. We view this move as a one-off measure that can temporarily alter positioning, but not the underlying fundamental picture. A sustained reversal in the yen would require a more decisive tightening of Bank of Japan policy. We therefore continue to focus on fundamentals rather than short-term moves driven by discretionary interventions.

Current positioning

The fund remains long oil and the U.S. dollar. We maintain short positions in U.S. Treasuries and the Nasdaq equity index, alongside long positions in the VIX volatility index and China.

CONFLICT OF INTEREST

The Company acts as the fund manager and holds 100% of the Fund's management shares. The Company and its affiliate(s) may act as wealth and investment manager for the Client and/or for the Fund. These roles may create potential conflicts of interest (including but not limited to including trade allocation, fee arrangements and related-party transactions). We maintain policies and controls to identify, manage and, where necessary, disclose such conflicts to clients. Related-party dealings are conducted on an arm's-length basis. Further information is available in the Private Placement Memorandum and other offering documentation ("Offering Documentation") which is provided free of charge upon request from client@acmgroup.ae

The directors of the Fund may serve as directors of other investment entities and, to the extent that the interests of the Fund and such other investment entities are inconsistent, such directors may have a conflict of interest. Although none of the directors is required to be a shareholder (i.e. investor) of the Fund, all of the directors and any connected persons may invest in the Fund.

The shareholders in the Fund may have conflicting investment, tax and other interests with respect to their investments in the Fund. The conflicting interests of individual shareholders may relate to or arise from, among other things, the nature of investments made by the Fund, the acquisition of investments and the timing of dispositions of investments. Consequently, conflicts of interest may arise in connection with decisions made by the Company, including with respect to the nature or structuring of investments, that may be more beneficial for one shareholder in the Fund than for another shareholder in the Fund, especially with respect to the shareholder's individual tax situations. In selecting and structuring investments appropriate for the Fund, the Company will not be obligated to consider the investment, tax or other objectives of any particular shareholder.

RISK DISCLOSURE

Investments in the Fund involve risk, including loss of capital, illiquidity, leverage and investment strategy-specific risks. Fees and expenses (including but not limited to fees payable to the Company as a fund manager) will reduce returns. The Client should review the Offering Documentation for more details, conduct his/her own due diligence and seek independent professional advice if necessary.
